the online CSULB Learning Management System, formerly BeachBoard and now Canvas, which students may keep access to after the first add/drop deadline which results in a charge to their CSULB Student Center Account[7]; and the Senate recommends that the Equitable Textbook Access Program automatically opts out students registered for courses with no required materials; and be it further that the Senate urges the Equitable Textbook Access Program to preserve the academic freedom of faculty to choose the textbooks required in the classes they instruct; and be it further that CSULB ASI urges the Academic Senate to encourage faculty members and lecturers